

Some Notes on Wedding Day Speeches:

Writing wedding day speeches can be daunting and stressful. Whether you're the father of the bride, the best man, a bridesmaid or the groom and have never had a problem cracking a few jokes or giving a decent presentation in work, the idea of the 'wedding speech' can terrify.

But don't worry.

Writing a decent wedding speech isn't as difficult as it seems. It is about editing. Get as many of your thoughts down on paper (or on screen) as you possibly can and as early as you can. It is never too early to start writing.

Don't worry about where to start. Remember the old journo hack's mantra: Don't get it right – just get it written.

No professional writer one ever writes a speech from start to finish. Start anywhere – at the middle, at the end... just start writing.

Write down the stories, in full. Don't be afraid about writing too much... it is better to have a first draft that is way overlong than one that is short. This allows you to pick the best bits and highlight those.

The real skill to good writing is plenty editing. With each revision and rewrite your speech will get shorter, tighter and better. Don't worry too much about putting in jokes. Sincerity is best.

You will also start to know it better and remember the sequence and the stories intuitively. On the day you will just need the script as a safety net.

Remember, wedding guests are positive listeners; they will be supportive, they don't expect much, they want to laugh, and will, even if you're not funny, so don't put too much pressure on yourself.

Groomsmen, the main thing you've to remember is that it's a toast not a roast, keep that in mind and everyone will be happy it went smoothly. To help you on the right track to speech success we've put together these wedding speech tips...

The New Wedding Speech

Traditionally the father of the bride, best man and groom were the only people who formally toasted at a wedding, but nowadays we're seeing the bride, maid of honour and bridesmaid say a few words, and in some occasions the 'Toast Time' opening up to the floor.

The main thing to remember is that this is the bride and groom's day (or the bride and bride or groom and groom). Whatever they want – goes. That's it.

Nothing is set in stone when it comes to weddings.

If the couple feel that having dad, mum or the best man worrying too much about public speaking, then they can let them off the hook and ask a friend or relative to say a few words instead.

Your bridesmaid might sing a song or a wedding guest might have written a poem to celebrate your marriage - tailor your speeches to your day, and don't let tradition dictate who gets their say on your Big Day.

Parent or guardian's Speech

- Keep it short - let guests know you'll be brief to take the pressure off you and them!
- Tell the bride how beautiful she looks, how talented and wonderful she is and how proud you are of her.
- Keep jokes to a minimum - You don't have to be a comedian. People love stories and Irish people in particular are hard wired to think and talk in stories. Tell stories – but keep them respectful and charming
- Talk briefly about marriage and about how special this day is to you and the rest of the family. Heartfelt is best. Say what is truly in your heart – remember the wise words (paraphrased) of Cato: Talk about what matters to you and the words will follow.
- Thank the guests for coming - If there's one or two who have come from afar to be there, or some elderly guests you'd like to mention, thank them here.
- Finish by welcoming your son or daughter-in-law into the family and tell everyone to enjoy their night. Simple!

Some wedding etiquette:

Decide whether you want the speeches before or after the meal.

Usually, after the meal is best -

Before the meal:

As the Bride and Groom arrive, the Best Man or the Hotel Maitre'd announces:

"Reverend Father, ladies and gentlemen, please stand and welcome the Bride and Groom".

If appropriate they can then call on the member of the clergy to say grace before meals

After the meal:

Announcement by Best Man or the Hotel Maitre'd:

"Ladies and Gentlemen, our Bride and groom are about to cut the cake. If anyone would like to take photographs, please come forward."

Allow the cake cutting ceremony to conclude then get the Maitre'd to introduce the Best man

Suggested structure (for guidance only)

- Best man's speech 5 – 7 mins
- On conclusion Best man makes a toast to the bride and groom.
- Best man and/or groomsmen read out cards and messages.
- Best man then calls on bride's mother or father or brother etc. to speak on behalf of the bride and her family.
- Best man then calls on groom's mother or father or brother etc. to speak on behalf of the groom and his family.
- Call on the Groom to speak (Finishes with a toast to the Bridesmaids)
- Call on the bride to speak (optional)

The general structure of the Best Man speech

- Introduction/Opening
- Being the best man/your relationship to the groom
- Funny stories involving the groom
- Compliment the bride etc and thank Bridesmaids and others
- The “happy couple” ie sincere section of the speech
  - How they met
  - Advice for the couple
- Toast the happy couple
- Cards and messages

Some reliable openers and one liners:

Before I start, if there's anybody here who feels a little nervous, worried and apprehensive, it's probably because you've just got married to XXXX.

When XXXX asked me to be a "Best Man", I wasn't really sure what my responsibilities were supposed to be. I asked around, and was told that my main duties for today were:

1. To ensure that the groom arrives on time,
2. To make sure he is sober,
3. And to make sure he is looking good.

Well 2 out of 3 isn't bad... (look at groom for a few seconds)... I'm best man, not a plastic surgeon!

To be fair XXXX is actually looking quite handsome tonight.... but - though it may be hard to believe - he didn't always look so well.

His parents had to borrow another baby for the baptism pictures. Yes, it is true that XXXX was the teacher's pet – but that was just because the teacher couldn't afford a dog!

I am deeply honoured to have been asked to be the best man. Some of you have been kind enough to say I was the right man for the job as I have been like (another) big brother figure to XXXX. To be honest I see myself as more of another father figure to him.

After all, I've watched him learned to drink from a bottle, seen him stagger about naked learning to walk, I've dressed and undressed him, and cleaned up after his mess. That was only this morning.

As many of you will know organizing the seating at a wedding reception can be a tricky business... where do you put Aunt Mary and mad Cousin Tom. I am happy that the happy couple accepted my suggestion that they use the wedding present list and put those who bought the biggest items nearest the front and... (look slowly around the room) work outwards from there depending on the size of the gift. Whoever bought the toast rack won't be able to hear this, as they're out in the car park.
